

Wealth manager receives Gold Standard award

26/11/2007 by: Press Release

Investment Quorum has just received a Gold Standard Award (from Incisive Media) for Independent Financial Advice, acknowledging its excellence across the board in terms of service and ability.

Investment Quorum received the award on Wednesday at the House of Commons event. 'It's a perfect way to follow last year's Highly Commended,' said CEO Lee Robertson.

The Gold Standards are considered to be one of the most sought after awards in the industry, as they are the extremely difficult to attain. Winners have to show excellence in five key areas:

- financial strength
- capability of the company to conduct business
- service
- fair value
- trust

Lee, who has been at the helm of Investment Quorum since its inception in 2000, explained that the award was 'a fitting tribute to the hard work and integrity of everyone that works here. I understand that only 48 awards have been given out across banking and financial services since the awards were launched in 2003, so to have one on our corporate mantelpiece is a proud accolade indeed.'

It's been a particularly good year for Investment Quorum, with the Gold Standard now sitting alongside the three-star Investor in Customers award, and the news that it is the 23rd fastest growing IFA out of 20,000 in the country.
